The story that we have been writing and reading again and again for 45 years with great pleasure - Interliber, this year takes place from November 7 to 12.

Interliber is the largest literary event in Croatia and a platform for the promotion of books, writers, reading, science and knowledge that brings together the most important publishers and bookstores. Being a part of this event has long become a pleasure and prestige for all stakeholders who participate in this extremely important activity, because there really is no better place for promotion in the literary business.

Anotation This book aims to offer an explanation as to why similar migration patterns in today's Republic of Croatia persist or occur cyclically in the past 130 years despite fundamental transformations of political systems as well as changes in the economic, cultural, educational, ideological and institutional framework. Although in recent times migrations in Croatia, both emigration and immigration, are often the result of a choice based on the individual decision of the migrants, it has been shown that they are still more often inevitable, i.e. conditioned by the socio-economic context and political events.

Anotation This book offers a lot of knowledge about the psychological and sociological aspects of the Homeland War, and especially about the veteran population that copes with the consequences of the war in the form of post-traumatic stress disorder. Furthermore, the contribution of this work is also evident in the fact that the interlocutor (co-author) held a high officer's post during the war, and such confessions are rare in the literature on PTSD, especially on one of the most problematic aspects of PTSD, which refers to dealing with guilt.

Anotation The book sheds light on an important part of Rijeka's maritime history, which enabled the economic rise of the city during the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy, more precisely after the Croatian-Hungarian settlement in 1868. Her focus is on the economic results of Rijeka's maritime trade, with particular emphasis on the importance of the city's industry, which was created in a tight symbiosis with shipping. At the beginning of the 20th century, the increased traffic through the port of Rijeka would bring it to tenth place among European ports. At work, there was a synergistic stimulus to the simultaneous development of Croatia and Hungary, often thanks to attracted foreign capital investments.

This is exactly what a university professor of anthropology did, who, after breaking her foot and the medical complications that followed, drove herself to therapy every day. In the process, she chatted with Uber drivers, precarious workers whose work is organized by an algorithm, i.e. Uber's application. Following her conversations, fragments that she later recorded, a wide range of life opens up before us*

Anotation In the center of the text are the author's diary notes from 1984, which he returns to after 36 years with the intention of retrospectively presenting impressions, knowledge, changes in life's maturation, social and political changes, and new horizons in historiography. From his diary, Miroslav Bertoša recounts events from his place of residence (the city of Pula), Istria, Croatia and Yugoslavia, but he also describes his stays in Ljubljana, Zagreb, Trieste, Bologna, Loreto, especially in Venice, where he regularly spent several weeks researching in the State Archives there and in Paris. From the diary, as the backbone of the book, some episodes from private life stand out, especially those characteristic of the way of life at that time, but in the foreground are essayistic, journalistic and historiographical accounts of the author's efforts to fit his everyday life into the methodological approaches of the changed reality.

Anotation Uvod u Jugoslaviju (The introduction to Yugoslavia) is a kind of reset of previous interpretations, let's hope and a reset of perceptions of an important chapter of Croatian (clearly, not only Croatian) history. This book, written above all for the new generations, born after the breakup of Yugoslavia, explains what Yugoslavia was and wanted to be - what it succeeded in and what it failed to do. She also offers a convincing answer to the question - why she broke up. This opens up space for new research, based on archival material as well as on solid and convincing scientific research methodology.

The author first places the learning of the standard language in a broad linguistic context and in the narrower context of learning the Croatian standard language, its idioms and functional styles. Tamara Gazdić-Alerić has comprehensively dealt with numerous language issues which, although there is a lot of literature on them, are rarely presented in this way.*

Anotation Agonija is a drama about the conflict between Miroslav Krleža and Ivo Andrić, the two greatest writers of the former Yugoslavia. The conflict between Andrić and Krleža contains the entire history of the relationship between politics and poetics during both the first - monarchist - and the second - socialist - Yugoslavia. And the Nobel committee also gets involved in this conflict. Namely, in 1958, the Union of Writers of Yugoslavia nominated Miroslav Krleža together with Ivo Andrić for the Nobel Prize. But only one of them can get it...

Anotation Miloš Đurđević studiously and expertly deals with the poetic imaginary of contemporary Croatian literature, this time choosing a series of names that belong to voices beyond the dominant lyrical orientations. At the same time, he approaches the selected poets as a refined connoisseur of their oeuvre, the relationship between the text and media-mediated reality, and the task that, in the end, poetry strives to preserve in this age of technical visualization of the world as a pledge of true telling.

Anotation The book entitled Hiniti i biti is divided into three units that gather around the phenomenon of acting, i.e. mask and pretense, transformation and reshaping - as an ambiguity that not only connects text and performance but also reveals itself as a key metaphor for theoretical considerations of the problem of gender difference. It is precisely the feminist perspective, which we find in conjunction with psychoanalytical or deconstructionist criticism, that allows the author a privileged approach to researching the phenomenon of acting as an existential, cognitive, ethical, political and aesthetic problem.

 In the new collection of poems in prose, Barbieri writes condensed meditative dedications to the Mediterranean landscape and its archetypal signs: olives, sea, storm, goat, bread. In his poetic vision, the Mediterranean is a space where ancient and Christian, mythological and religious intertwine and co-exist, creating a landscape that is both real and imaginary at the same time.

 Description 176 str. ; 20 cm.
 ISBN 9789535206644 : EUR 18,80 US$ 21,00
 Annotation Albert is a literary powerful book, poetic, dramatic and deeply happy. In it, Prtenjača confronts us again and again with our gaps and superficialities, but also offers bright solutions. They are not where they keep telling us they are. The main character of this novel is a quiet rebel, similar to the walker from Brdo (The Hill), Andrej from Plivač (The Swimmer) or the co-painter from Tiho rušenje (Silent Demolition). In this series of unforgettable characters, Albert is the closest to the dream of happiness, that powerful moment in the morning, while the eyelids are still down, and the sun has already spilled over everyone and everything.

 Annotation The short novel "Alisa iza smrti" is focused again on love relationships that acquire a special drama and fate in a war situation. The story follows two scouts stationed at an observation post along the front, with whom, with a large dose of realism, we get to know the authentic circumstances of life on the battlefield, but also a little bit of the network of relationships between people, both defenders and enemies, whose intertwined ties go back to the past, and whose long-term and pent-up conflicts erupt in full force. Written in a superb style, with incredible turns, literature in the best light!

All the stories in the collection are full of details, solitudes, never-said questions and many silences. The common feature of the three "shows" is their brevity scene, dynamism, multilingualism and the mixing of verse and prose.*

 Description 184 str. ; 20 cm.
 ISBN 9789535206651 : EUR 18,80 US$ 21,00
 Anotation Knjiga za Maju (The book for Maja) brings a completely intimate story, but also the story of an entire generation, torn apart by the legacy of the past and the imposed expectations of society. It is a story about many displacements and one return - above all about love, the love of fate, written without any pathos, placed only in the glittering freckles of one face. With his second novel, and perhaps his most personal work to date, Tomaš once again confirmed that he is an exceptional prose author with an already recognizable poetic sensibility for language.

Author Šimić, Ivan, publicist
 Title Matijino stoljeće rata
 Impresum Zagreb : Despot Infinitus, 2023.
 Description 326 str. ; 21 cm.
 ISBN 9789533661490 : EUR 16,60 US$ 18,50
 Anotation Matija's Century of War is an epic, so Croatian story about the 20th century, written in a superior narrative and style, which you will not read, but swallow! By intertwining fiction and real events, not caring about literary-theoretical laws and rigid genre molds, about which according to his own admission he knows little or nothing anyway, the obviously well-informed author brings testimonies about people and events in a really wide temporal and spatial scope, thus tragic fate convincingly places the titular heroines in the historical context that actually decisively determined that fate. To that extent, this book is simultaneously a Chronique du xxe siècle, as the subtitle suggests, but also a moving story about a woman who survived as many as three wars, losing in each of them one of her closest relatives.

Oče ako jesi is an atypical family saga, a great novel about women and men, about political officials, about ordinary people, but above all about sons who are left without fathers and look for them all their lives instead of going their own, different way.*

 Description 232 str. ; 21 cm.

 Anotation Three women and three wives. Three lives and three lies. All three women had dreams that didn't happen achieved, each was betrayed by the one they loved, the one who was supposed to be their support. Each of them suffered the most in the home, and their men were protected by relatives, friends, society... Mihaela Gašpar gives voice to those who do not speak, to those who are ashamed of their bruises and wounds, to those who fear for their lives and to those who only meet their ex-husbands in public places. The voice of those who have been let down by their loved ones. Moving dreams moves us into the "invisible" world next to us, the world to which we ourselves (un)consciously belong and which we must change.

 Title Reći brodovima da se brzo vraćam

 Description 159 str. ; 20 cm.
 ISBN 9789538209604 : EUR 15,00 US$ 16,90
 Anotation Reći brodovima da se brzo vraćam (Tell the ships that I'll be back soon), the second novel for adults by Melita Rundek, a favorite children's writer, deals with the relations between neighbors in a building on Zagreb's Peščenica at the beginning of the war in the 1990s. Melita Rundek describes the war from a woman's point of view and in the novel achieves a cathartic feeling of sadness due to stopped lives and lost loves. Although the background is a reconstructed wartime reality in Zagreb and Croatia, the novel does not aim for politicization or conflict, but from the female discourse repeats the thesis that love, realized or unrealized, intimate, human, personal, is the only possible way out.*

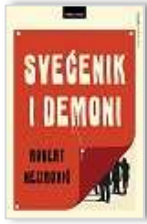

Author Majerović-Stilinović, Milan
 Title Srce mog medvjeda

 Anotation After the acclaimed collection "stories on the go Što sam naučio na planini (What I learned on the mountain), Milan Majerović-Stilinović tackled a genre so rare in our country by writing a novel inspired by the mountain. At the center of the story is Marko Turk, a "peculiar forest hermit" whose lair was probably stumbled upon by all those who climbed Veliki Risnjak on one of the paths from Crni Lug. After telling the story of his life, Majerović-Stilinović wrote an ode to the wilderness of Gorski kotar, but also to its natives and their way of life in the middle and end of the 19th century.

Author Srdarević, Goran
 Title Starački dom za maloljetnu delinkvenciju

 Description 176 str. ; 21 cm.
 ISBN 9789532671070 : EUR 18,50 US$ 20,70
 Anotation The novel is about ordinary people who have spent their entire lives fighting for survival, sacrificing for their families, raising children, always putting themselves last. Now that that struggle is behind them, and their grown children were born in the same hatch of life that they went through, they found themselves in a nursing home. No, instead of enjoying a peaceful old age, they refuse to submit to the outrage of their surroundings, starting with the owner and manager of the nursing home called Idila and ending with their children and grandchildren, they decide to spend the little time they have left in this world the way they think they deserve. . . Although it is a comedy, the novel through humor actually talks about a serious and somewhat contradictory topic, which awaits each of us with time.

 Anotation Sat koji otkucava samo tik (The clock is only ticking) is a novel about love, betrayal, revenge and crime. About the moment when the irrational dominates the situation, reason is lost in the face of feelings, anger and uncontrolled actions. When private madness becomes an "unconscious social revolution", there is no longer any difference between seriousness and farce, humor and horror, in that strange time in which it barely ticks and only - tick!*

Through the destinies of the characters, Nežirović scans various layers of society, and in this one can clearly feel the criticism towards deviations, immorality, and corruption.  Anotation The book of short stories, "Tišina u osinjak" by Luka Ostojić is a book that leads to dangerous, uncertain places. Welcome, then, to complicated love relationships, strange marriages and large families - places you know, but which by some miracle you have never seen before. Clever, moving, humorous and seductively drinkable, Luka Ostojić's Silence in the Aspen is one of the wittiest domestic books you will read, but the good fun in it will have to be paid for with reflection, and with a little chill. By reading and asking: is the wasp really quiet, or do we just need to wait a little longer?

 Anotation U ime oca i sina i kćeri (In the name of father and son and daughter) is a novel that takes us through the big and small mistakes of ordinary lives in an incredibly intimate and emotional way. Combining an intimate confession, philosophy and poetic reflections, this novel reminds us why it is important to love, to sin and in the end – to persevere in tenderness until the last moment. Kristijan Vujičić shows us that it is never too late to listen to the heart, follow our dreams, and that the loss of loved ones can sometimes be the driving force behind change.

 Anotation The novel shows in a new light the story of Mila Gojsalić, one of our greatest heroines, the life of the Polish Republic and the legacy of the famous Frankopans as the southern and northern wings of the Croatian Adriatic, faced with seemingly impossible balances of power in the fight against the vast Ottoman Empire. An adventure, picaresque and romance novel tailored to connect a modern audience with its incredible heritage.

Anotation The work of Aleksandar Marks is extremely significant in terms of the earliest animation in our area. He was the main cartoonist of the first Croatian cartoon in color, "Red Riding Hood", in 1954. He worked in different cartoon studios, and since 1956 and the founding of the Zagreb Film Cartoon Studio, he has been employed there until his retirement. He is the originator of the distinctly modern artistry of cartoons, which gave rise to the term Zagreb School of Cartoons. Although an award-winning author of an animated film in the country and abroad, in today's broader social discourse, Marks remains unknown and unrecognized, even in the local community.

Anotation Osamotne okolnosti is something completely different: a fused graphic-literary magazine in which the author, the cheekily multi-talented Enver Krivac, drew and wrote four issues of the newspaper, combined them into an art book that, with contemporary art, stifled correctness and calculations, has absolutely nothing connections. This is a compendium of art that we already forgot existed, let's say those of American underground comics with all their provocations of a formal and substantive nature, anarcho-liberal outbursts and (auto)irony.

Anotation The eighties of the twentieth century became mythical - music, the feeling of freedom, the loosening of rigid socialism, technological progress, faith in a better future, but above all popular culture created a time that was different and unique. Snježana Banović was born in a happy moment to live in Zagreb in those years, a city that "emerges from a dream", where "music comes from the basement and the roof"... and to be one of the active and important protagonists of the new wave scene, and later also of the cultural and theater scene.
